Charley Creek Inn to host Hoosier Salon

The Charley Creek Inn will be the location for a new Hoosier Salon gallery, according to Donnae Dole, executive director of the Hoosier Salon's Patrons Association.

"It is an honor to have such a fine home in Charley Creek Inn for our new gallery," said Dole. "Wabash County is very supportive of the arts so we feel this location is the perfect fit for both the Hoosier Salon and northern Indiana."

The gallery will be located just off the lobby of the Inn and will be the Salon's northern Indiana gallery and the third in the state. New Harmony is home to the southern gallery and Broad Ripple Gallery in Indianapolis is the Salon's central Indiana location.

The Honeywell Center's Clark Gallery is currently featuring an exhibit of Hoosier Salon artists.

"We know the fine reputation of the Hoosier Salon will only enhance our efforts at the Honeywell Center," said Clark Gallery Coordinator Andrea Zwiebel. "It's a real boost to our arts community to have a Hoosier Salon gallery in Wabash. We've seen a steady increase of interest in the visual arts, and we expect the gallery to attract many more visitors."

The Hoosier Salon legacy began in 1925 when the Daughters of Indiana opened the doors to the first exhibition at Marshall Fields and Company Galleries in Chicago. The high quality of art was applauded by critics and the public.

The first exhibition included works by such notables as T.C. Steele, J. Otis Adams and Will Vawter, and was an unqualified success. In 1942 the annual exhibit moved from Chicago to downtown Indianapolis and is annually housed at the Indiana State Museum.

The Hoosier Salon galleries also host more than 30 special shows each year.

The exhibit at the Clark Gallery will remain up until Jan. 14.
